NVIDIA designs graphics processing units, system-on-a-chip, and related products for visual computing and accelerated computing platforms specialized for the gaming, professional visualization, datacenter, and automotive markets. NVIDIA products are largely distributed through its channel partner network and sold to computer hardware manufacturing companies primarily in Asia that incorporate NVIDIA products into their own products (e.g. personal computers, workstations, servers, mobile devices, or add-in graphics cards) for onward sale to end consumers.

NVIDIA also provides high performance computing network solutions (HPN products) by supplying intelligent interconnect solutions and services including cyber security technology for servers, storage, and hyper-converged infrastructure. NVIDIA HPN products are largely sold to storage and communications infrastructure equipment vendors, original design manufacturers, distributors, and large end customers.

Our UK subsidiaries perform local marketing, promotion, and demand-generation activities in relation to end consumers and channel partners, as well as routine research and development services.
